Pipeline Safety Trust
Facts and Circumstances Analysis for Publicly Supported Organizations
EIN: 56-2369975
Attachment to Schedule A of Form 990 for 2011

The Pipeline Safety Trust qualifies as a publicly supported charity under the facts and circumstances test of Internal Revenue Code ("I.R.C.") Section 509(a)(1) Public Charities. Although Pipeline Safety Trust does not consistently receive at least one third of its support from governmental units or from direct or indirect contributions from the general public, it normally receives a substantial part of its support from governmental and public sources and is in the nature of a publicly supported organization. The Pipeline Safety Trust clearly meets the requirements for the facts and circumstances test of Treasury Regulations Section 1.170A-9T(f)(3).

1. Percentage of financial support from public and governmental sources

For the aggregated period 2007 through 2011, the Pipeline Safety Trust received 25.82% of its support from governmental and public sources.

2. Sources and nature of public support

The percentage of the Pipeline Safety Trust's support from the general public or governmental sources is currently below one third of total support because a high percentage of its total support comes from investment income on its initial endowment funds, which were contributed by a governmental unit. In 2003, the U.S. Department of Justice recommended to a U.S. District Court judge in Seattle that four million dollars of criminal fines imposed as a result of the 1999 Olympic Pipeline explosion in Bellingham, Washington, be provided to the Pipeline Safety Trust to promote fuel transportation safety throughout the United States. The judge concurred and the money was given to the Trust in July of 2003. The Board of Directors maintains the contributed assets as an endowment and uses the investment income to support the Trust's mission: to promote fuel transportation safety through education and advocacy, by increasing access to information and by building partnerships with residents, safety advocates, government, and industry that result in safer communities and a healthier environment.

The public support that the Pipeline Safety Trust receives does not come from members of one family or one private grant making organization, but is from the general public, governmental units, and other public charities.

Since its inception, the Pipeline Safety Trust has been organized and operated in a manner to attract new and additional public and governmental support, and has maintained a continuous and bona fide program for solicitation of funds from the general public. Efforts to increase public support were small during the organization's early years to allow the Trust to focus on providing strong programs of public benefit to establish its credibility. The Pipeline Safety Trust now increasingly carries on public solicitation programs through annual events, newsletters, interaction with a wide variety of pipeline safety stakeholders, and the efforts of its officers and directors.

In 2009, the Trust underwent a significant organizational restructuring to increase its visibility nationwide. As part of this effort, a program director was hired to help expand fundraising efforts and a development committee was created by the Board of Directors to focus on directed fund-raising activities. In addition, the Trust increased its contribution solicitation efforts through newsletters, its website, and direct solicitations at its annual pipeline safety conference, which brings together pipeline safety stakeholders from around the nation.

The Trust has successfully applied for specific pipeline safety grants from the federal government, assisted and partnered with other community organizations in their applications for these federal grants, and undertaken work for projects funded by these grants. The Trust has developed a fund-raising brochure that highlights the mission of the Trust and its impacts nationwide. This brochure is used throughout the country to increase awareness and encourage giving. Additional fund-raising activities are planned for the future that will appeal to a broad cross-section of the public including:

- An expanded effort at direct solicitations of various supporter groups, including the start of an annual email/letter solicitation program and holding a fundraising event.
- Development of a program to reach out to government attorneys associated with pipeline cases in the interest of having a portion of the monies imposed by courts as civil and criminal penalties be contributed to the Trust.

3. Representative governing body

The 9 directors on the Pipeline Safety Trust's Board represent the interests of the general public throughout the United States. They are drawn from 7 states from Alaska to Florida. These directors include a former elected Florida county council member; a former elected Louisiana parish council member; an attorney for the New Mexico Environment Department; the former primary staff member on pipeline issues for the U.S. House of Representatives' Committee on Energy & Commerce; the arctic program director for a national environmental organization and a former member of the U.S. Department of Transportation's Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee.

The executive director of the Pipeline Safety Trust is an elected county council member in Washington State, has been appointed three times by the Governor of the State of Washington to the Citizens Committee on Pipeline Safety, has been appointed by the U.S. Secretary of Transportation as a public member of the federal Technical Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee, and serves on the steering committee for the federal Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration's Pipelines and Informed Planning Alliance.

4. Availability of public facilities or services factor

The Pipeline Safety Trust has worked to achieve its mission by maintaining the largest independent pipeline safety website in the country (<http://www.pstrust.org>). The Trust also operates two news and discussion listservs that provide timely information to more than 750 people nationwide on a daily basis. It publishes a nationally distributed newsletter multiple times a year, and contracts for independent white papers on various pipeline safety issues, which are made available for free to the public. The Trust's staff serves on numerous state and federal pipeline safety advisory committees, is frequently invited to speak at public, industry and government meetings and conferences, and serves as an independent information source for news media across the country. In 2010 and 2011 the Trust was invited to testify to the U.S. Congress seven times.

The Trust's annual pipeline safety conference is the only national conference that is open to all pipeline safety stakeholders: the public, industry, and government. To enable the public to attend, the Trust provides significant travel scholarships. The U.S. Department of Transportation supports the conference by providing webcast services for national viewing, as well as arranging for many of the top officials from the federal Office of Pipeline Safety to attend and speak.

The Trust has worked closely with the U.S. Department of Transportation to develop and promote a new national technical assistance grant program so non-profit groups and local governments can hire independent experts to review pipeline safety concerns in their communities. The Trust has also taken the lead in many communities across the country to help in the implementation of recommendations of the recently released Pipelines and Informed Planning Alliance report.

In the past two years the Trust was hired by two other non-profits organizations – the Association of Washington Cities and the Fort Worth League of Neighborhood Associations – to research and help implement pipeline safety educational programs. Also in the past year two major cities – Fort Worth, Texas and Salt Lake City, Utah - have covered the Trust's expenses to come to those communities to advise local leaders on pipeline safety issues that have affected them. Salt Lake City also contracted with the Pipeline Safety Trust to hold a series of workshops, a two day conference, and draft a report on pipeline safety issues in the greater Salt Lake Valley.

5. Additional factors pertinent to membership organizations

The Pipeline Safety Trust is not a membership organization.
